Global Financial Lines Expert witness

vrs»adjusters

We have experience of producing expert reports, appointed by the courts or one of the parties in dispute, as well as producing joint expert reports with others. Such reports can be required when a non litigated matter is more formally pursued or when it is litigated from the outset. The ability to continue to provide expertise through to court avoids the cost of introducing new experts if the matter becomes more formal.

Instructions relate not only to financial losses alone, but also to claims comprising business interruption and material damage elements – we offer one expert opinion, but draw on the expertise of colleagues with buildings or engineering expertise, as would be the case after an insured incident. Such multi disciplinary reports are common in the case of broker negligence disputes, for example.

Key features of our service include:

- Providing advice that will withstand scrutiny in court
- Supporting resolution not extension of disputes where possible
- Provision of an initial opinion as early as possible to help the development of an overall case strategy
- Provision of interim/final reports, setting out the scope of evidence considered and allowing discussion on intermediate findings
- Attendance at mediation meetings/informal meetings with other experts to discuss cases or prepare joint formal reports
- Submission of budgeted costs and early discussion where costs will exceed budget, with identified reasons before the costs are incurred.
